

Around the world a song may travel

Around the world a song may travel
Around the world its notes may ring,
And though the words may change and alter
That song will never fail or falter
As long as we are there to sing,
As long as we are there to sing.

Around the world our hearts may travel
To kindred spirits everywhere
And though we've little chance of meeting
Yet we reach out our hands in greeting
To those who have a song to share,
To those who have a song to share.

Around the world our voices travel
Like migrant birds upon the wing
And like so many gone before us
We too will gladly join in chorus
With all of those who love to sing,
With all of those who love to sing.
